2014 to present	Director, Cornell Cooperative Extension, and Associate Dean for College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, and College of Human Ecology.
2004 to present	Professor, Postharvest Physiology, Department of Horticulture, Cornell University.
2006 to 2014	Associate Director, Cornell Cooperative Extension, Agriculture and Food Systems.
1994 - 2003	Associate-Professor, Postharvest Physiology, Department of Horticulture, Cornell University.
1985 - 1994	Science manager (1986 onwards) and scientist in the Postharvest Science Group of The Horticulture and Food Research Institute of New Zealand, Auckland (formerly the Division of Horticulture and Processing, 1985-1990, and DSIR Fruit and Trees, 1990-1992.

1981-1985	Graduate student in Department of Horticulture and Forestry at Rutgers University, NJ, USA supported by a New Zealand National Research Advisory Council fellowship.
1978-1981	Scientist in the Postharvest Physiology and Storage Section of the Division of Horticulture and Processing, DSIR.

Research Focus

My research program is focused on storage and ripening from both applied and fundamental aspects. A primary area is the development of knowledge required for use of 1-methylcyclopropene (1-MCP), a new ethylene-binding inhibitor that extends the storage life of apples. This work is now being extended to preharvest 1-MCP applications. I also conduct research on new cultivars of importance to New York growers, on the effects of postharvest techniques on the nutritional quality of fruit, and to better understand the underlying mechanisms in fruit responses to storage conditions such as temperature, atmosphere, and 1-MCP, and the interaction of these factors with the development of storage disorders. Current projects focus on the development of physiological disorders of apples such as internal browning, external carbon dioxide injury and superficial scald.

Outreach and Extension Focus

I am responsible for developing and conducting the harvest maturity management, postharvest handling, and storage technology component of the multidisciplinary statewide fruit Extension program. I work in cooperation with Extension faculty in various departments, regional fruit specialists, extension educators, storage operators, and marketers in development, conduct, and evaluation of the Extension program.
